ABOUT THE COVER:

Five senior home economics women lived during the day in the Home Management House during the first eight weeks of the term. Under the supervision of the department chairman, Miss Anna Mae Myers, the seniors assisted in the management and household duties of the East College Street house. Few home ec majors were more excited about the new Moomaw Hall facility than were these five, who are, from left, Ina Fitzwater, Broadway, Va.; Carole Trahan, Baltimore, Md.; Holly Hendry, Green Brook, N. J.; Caroline Grossnickle, Walkersville, Md., and Nancy Frambes, Northfield, N. J.

MOOMAW HALL:

“... for the betterment of our families and society”

“WHAT is the place of home economics today and what is its future?”

The occasion for this question was an appropriate one—the October 19 groundbreaking for Moomaw Hall, the new $500,000 home economics facility on the Bridgewater College campus. The question was asked and answered by Miss Anna Mae Myers, chairman of the Home Economics Department, in her remarks at the groundbreaking ceremony, held as a part of Homecoming Day activities.

Her reply was both an affirmative and challenging one. “Probably no other profession has more to offer in helping people to live, making a living and serve others and, in so doing, to realize their potential as human beings as does home economics,” she said.

“As our society grows more complicated there is increasing need for the strengthening of families. The career of being a family member or homemaker is a complex and difficult one,” she remarked.

Miss Myers allied home economics to other professional services in noting that “the home economist has an obligation to carry the torch for the home and community just as the physician has for the health of people. The great wealth of new products and the complexity of modern living increase the need for informed home economists,” she said. Internationalism, population shifts, and welfare trends have also contributed, she said, to the increasing demand for home economists.

The preliminary ceremonies were held in the dining hall of Rebecca Hall, which itself will be part of the new construction and renovation project. Although rain forced the cancellation of some Homecoming events, it slowed enough to allow for the actual groundbreaking on the construction site.

Dr. Wayne F. Geisert, college president, presided at the ceremonies, which included short presentations from the different groups related to the construction. The Leland C. Moomaws of Roanoke, for whom the new building will be named, were recognized in absentia, for their contributions and support given to the project over many years.

Noting the interest of the Moomaws in Bridgewater College, Dr. Warren D. Bowman observed that “in naming this new home economics building Moomaw Hall, we are honoring a couple who have the college in their hearts.

“This is shown by their love, their loyalty, their service, and by their generous gifts to the college, which over a period of years would amount to $100,000,” he said.

Dr. Bowman noted that Mrs. Moomaw herself has given about $12,000 toward the project, and has been "profoundly interested in seeing young women prepare to be efficient homemakers, as she herself has been."

"The plan for this building, for which we are breaking ground today, is excellent," said the former Bridgewater president. "It will serve the significant function of preparing countless young women to teach home economics, and to become efficient homemakers."

This year the college has 50 girls majoring in home economics, with a record enrollment of 20 freshman girls. Home economics has been a curriculum offering at Bridgewater for over 30 years, with two degrees offered.

The new facility will have designated areas honoring S. Ruth Howe, former chairman of the department, and the late Annie Bucher Roop. Miss Howe retired in 1966 after 21 years on the Bridgewater faculty.

Three different sites and three different plans were projected for the new facility since 1950, Miss Howe noted in summing up the steps taken over the years in planning the building. Three different price tags also were stated, each growing successively larger. Other construction on campus, more urgently needed, took precedence and the home economics project was delayed several times.

The contract calls for completion of the building for occupancy in September 1969.

Groundbreaking for Miss Howe was a "red letter day," she said, noting, "I don't know if we will be able to keep our feet on the ground as we see the building take shape this coming year, but we will do our best." During the current year, Miss Howe has taught part-time in a home management course and supervises student teachers.

Holly R. Hendry, a Green Brook, N. J., senior, represented her classmates in home economics in the ceremony. While having a long history on the campus, home economics has not had its own building. Miss Hendry alluded to this: "Today we are breaking for a tradition. Breaking ground for the new housing of our department, and breaking the tradition of existing in other buildings."

But tradition has value too, she added. "Our Bridgewater College tradition is something upon which to build, and since we in the Home Economics Department have a heritage of capable professors, we have a base upon which to build," she said.

Looking back over her four years at Bridgewater, Miss Hendry said, "We have all grown and matured, whether we tried to or not, through our trials, successes and experiences in college and life. I think our Home Economics Department has also grown and matured through our trials, successes and experiences."

Miss Hendry was one of five home economics seniors living in the college's Home Management House, where, under the supervision of the department chairman, she participated in the cooking, cleaning, managing, sewing, and other home-making duties for the first eight weeks of the term. Moomaw Hall will have three live-in apartments which will replace the house now used.

The new facilities include 8,000 square feet of new construction to be added to the east of Rebecca Hall, and renovation of some 15,000 square feet. The present foods service kitchen will become the home economics food laboratory. The Rebecca Hall dining area will become a lecture room-auditorium and classroom and office space for the art department. Additional art department space is presently under construction in the lower level of Rebecca Hall as a part of the Campus Center project.

A portion of the top floor of the building will be renovated as the Home Management Unit and for instructional space, plus faculty offices.

An informational brochure on the planned facility went to alumni and friends of the college in November. It noted that while present funds have enabled the college to proceed with construction, more funds are needed to cover complete costs. A return envelope was enclosed for responses to the 90th Anniversary Fund campaign, of which Moomaw Hall is the second major undertaking. David L. Holl, director of development, has noted that projects are available for persons who wish to contribute to a specific area in the new facility.

Pennsylvanian Chosen 1968 Homecoming Queen

Queen Carol L. Bucher

MISS CAROL L. BUCHER, Manheim, Pa., senior, reigned over Homecoming 1968 activities October 19 with her court of four princesses representing each of the classes. A physical education major, Carol has been active on the tennis and field hockey varsity teams at Bridgewater and is a member of the Women's Athletic Association.

Co-captain of the field hockey squad, she was selected as a member of the first team of the Southeast Field Hockey Tournament at Williamsburg, Va. The Homecoming Queen was crowned at the Homecoming dance in alumni gymnasium by Barry E. Myers, Hyattsville, Md., senior and football squad co-captain.

On the Queen's court were Lynn A. Taylor, Westminster, Md., freshman; Marcia G. Carter, Centreville, Md., sophomore; Lois J. Sulser, Columbia, S. C., junior, and Linda Jean Buckner, Pulaski, Va., senior.

While several events of the day, which was planned on the theme of

"See What Tomorrow Brings!", had to be cancelled because of rain, the Eagles went on to win their football game against Frostburg, Md., State College, 31-0, and a cross-country track meet with Gallaudet College, Washington, D. C., 19-42.

The day was highlighted by reunion dinners for the classes of 1943, 1952-54, and 1967, a concert by the College Chorale, receptions for home economics and music alumni, and an after-game reception.

PARENTS' DAY DRAWS 700 TO B.C. CAMPUS

More than 700 parents of Bridgewater sons and daughters spent Nov. 16 on the B.C. campus for the tenth annual Parents' Day.

The parents were the guests of the college for luncheon and for a girls' hockey game with Madison College and a cross-country track meet with Roanoke College. Tours of the campus, open house in the residence halls, and an artmobile from the Virginia Museum were part of the day's events.

The College Chorale and band entertained the parents at a morning assembly, where greetings were brought by President Geisert, Student Senate President Lynn Myers, and Dr. George M. Nipe, Sr., Harrisonburg, Va., chairman with Mrs. Nipe of the Parents' Advisory Committee.

HENRY Albertson (John Sheridan) explains the fine points of acting to El Gallo (Steve Hale) in "The Fantasticks," given in Cole Hall in November.

The Pinion Players presented "The Fantasticks," a romantic musical comedy, in the evening. Both performances played to capacity audiences during the weekend.

Serving this year with the Nipes on the Parents' Advisory Committee, which planned the day with a faculty-student committee, are Dr. and Mrs. Richard Binford, Hagerstown, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Buckner, Pulaski, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Clark, Jr., Alexandria, Va.; Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Hagood, Jr., Clover, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Hershey, Staunton, Va.; Dr. and Mrs. C. K. Johnson, Staunton, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Layman, Daleville, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Omer Long, Frederick, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. Russell Morgan, Westminster, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pamplin, Crofton, Md., and Mr. and Mrs. Zane Showker, Harrisonburg, Va.

MOUNT MCKINLEY, the highest mountain in North America, rises to 20,320 feet above sea level from the subarctic tundra of central Alaska. Since the first successful ascents of the north peak (1910) and the south peak (1913), climbers have been drawn from all parts of the earth by the challenge of its sheer walls of ice and rock.

Although there are higher mountains in the Andes and Himalayas, few, if any, have a greater base-to-summit height (17,000 feet), and none have a higher continuous wall of ice and snow than its 14,000 foot Wickersham Wall. McKinley's location near the Arctic Circle spawns weather as bad as any on earth and, even in midsummer, fierce storms may bring temperatures of well below zero F. and winds of 100 miles an hour to its upper levels. It was into this alien land of black rock and blue ice that our four-man climbing party planned to intrude.

Ron Priebe, from Seattle, the leader and chief organizer, is a professional glaciologist who had been on the mountain twice before, but had never reached the summit. He had extensive experience in the Arctic, Alaska, the Yukon, and western Washington. Mark Switzer, from Metuchen, N. J., had skied and climbed in the Alps while in Europe with the U. S. Army, and was in charge of the radio. Scott Foster, from Corvallis, Oregon, had climbed in the Cascades and Colorado and had also made a previous attempt on McKinley. I had winter mountaineering experience in Montana and Wyoming and glacier experience on Mount Rainier, but had never attempted anything in McKinley's class.

After many months of correspondence and the gradual accumulation of necessary equipment, we assembled at McKinley Park headquarters on June 22. After a conference with the chief ranger, we were ready to start the 85 mile drive to Wonder Lake, the closest point to the peak accessible by automobile. Since the park authorities do not allow air drops or the landing of men or equipment within the park boundaries, we faced an 18 mile walk from the lake southeast to McKinley's foothills and McGonigall pass, then southwest up the Mul-drow glacier and another 18 miles to the summit.

We had 1,200 pounds of equipment, which included 168 man-days of food weighing 600 pounds, and 200 pounds of white gasoline for the stoves. After setting up our radio receiver at the Wonder Lake Ranger Station, we were ready to start.

We shouldered our 100 pound packs on June 23 and began the first leg of the trip, from Wonder Lake to the bank of the McKinley River, three miles away. The terrain was swampy and swarming with mosquitos, all of them seemingly famished. The river, a typical "braided" stream, originated from the terminus of the Mulrow glacier some 15 miles to the east, and by the time it reached us it had broken into about 30 channels, each 10 to 100 feet wide in a mile-wide bed. The icy, grey water was so swift that many times we were almost swept off our feet.

During the next week, we relayed our loads over the undulating, mosquito-ridden tundra to the Clearwater River seven miles away, and finally to McGonigall Pass where we made camp overlooking the Mul-

drow glacier. From here we had a striking view up the glacier toward McKinley's north peak, with the south peak behind it. The actual climb would now begin and for the next three weeks we would be roped together unless actually in camp. Five miles up the Muldrow glacier we could see our first major problem, the lower icefall, where gigantic blocks of ice split apart and tumbled over a sudden drop in the bedrock. As we neared the icefall, we encountered deep slush, and just below it we had to put on our snowshoes for the first time.

Several days were required to negotiate the maze of crevasses and to establish Camp I above the icefall. Here we found to our dismay that the easy, level route from the lower icefall to the Great Icefall 5½ miles above, had been altered by the earthquake so that a huge wave in the glacier was created and the whole route badly crevassed. We were now above the melt zone of the glacier and had to probe carefully for hidden crevasses almost every step of the way. By July 12, we finally pushed the route around the Great Icefall and into a giant bowl, or cirque, where the Muldrow originates, at an altitude of 10,000 feet. The weather had been good except for short periods of fog and occasional snow, and we were strong and in good spirits.

At the upper level end of the cirque is a 3,000 foot cliff above which is a steep valley lying between the north and south peaks. The valley is occupied by the Harper glacier with the Harper icefall extending down over the cliff to the surface of the Muldrow below. Avalanches were pouring down this cliff several times an hour, and tent-sized blocks of ice from the icefall were scattered over the floor of the cirque, to as much as a mile from the base of the cliff.

We prudently pitched our tent well out of range, and prepared to ascend into the high valley by means

THE AUTHOR:

Warren D. Bowman, Jr., graduated from Bridgewater College summa cum laude in 1950. He received his degree of Doctor of Medicine with distinction from the Medical School of the University of Pennsylvania. Along with his medical degree Dr. Bowman was awarded the Albert Einstein Medical Center, Medical Staff Prize, for making the highest scholastic average in his class and the School of Medicine's Pediatric Prize for doing the best work in the field of pediatrics.

For some time he has been associated with the Billings Clinic in Billings, Montana, as a specialist in hematology. In 1966 he was selected to the American Society of Hematology. In November 1967, Dr. Bowman received a fellowship in cancer chemotherapy sponsored by the National Cancer Institute and was at the University of Southern California in Los Angeles for a month's work. Several years ago he was appointed the assistant medical advisor for the Northern Rocky Mountain Division of the National Ski Patrol.

Always interested in nature, Dr. Bowman has found time in a busy professional life for his pursuit of the outdoors. In this first-person story, he tells of his participation in a climb this past summer of the south slope of Mt. McKinley, Alaska, the highest mountain in the North American range.

focus on faculty

Charles F. Fuller, Jr., instructor in drama and speech, received his Master of Fine Arts degree with a major in theater from Ohio University, Athens, on December 14. He has been on the Bridgewater faculty since 1963. An article by Mr. Fuller on the church and the theater artist appeared in the November 7 Church of the Brethren Messenger.

Dr. Harry G. M. Jopson, professor of biology, served as Bridgewater College chairman for the United Fund campaign last fall.

Dr. William L. Mengebier, professor of biology, is serving as the B. C. representative on the Advisory Committee of the Rockingham Memorial Hospital School of Nursing, Harrisonburg, Va.

Dr. Dale V. Ulrich, dean of the college, was selected by the American Council on Education as one of the young deans to participate in the Council's Institute for Academic Deans at St. Louis University in November. Also during the month Dr. Ulrich spoke at the conference of the Regional Education Laboratory for the Carolinas and Virginia at Raleigh, N. C.

James A. Goering, assistant professor of German, had an article published in the October 1968 issue of The Sword and Trumpet, a religious publication. The article was titled "Martin Luther King and the Gandhian Method of Nonviolent Resistance."

Dr. Donald R. Witters, assistant professor of psychology, is serving on a planning committee at the district level relative to the 1970 White House Conference on Children and Youth. Miss Hessie Harris, Washington, D. C., junior, is also a member of the committee. Dr. Witters was notified in September by Arizona State University that he was the recipient of the Doctor of Philosophy degree, which will be awarded in June.

Raymond J. D. Baker, instructor in economics, is providing B. C. liaison for a symposium involving businessmen, and college students and teachers in discussing the motives, objectives, problems, philosophy, and principles at work in the modern economy. The symposium, planned for early in 1969, is sponsored by the Harrisonburg-Rockingham, Va., Chamber of Commerce.

Paul M. Kline, assistant professor of art, and Miss S. Ruth Howe, associate professor of home economics, were appointed as additional members of the campus center building committee. The committee is now considering interior decoration and furnishings of the center.

Art Department professors Paul Kline and Robert E. Purvis had sculpture on exhibit in Richmond during October, Mr. Kline at the Eric Schindler Gallery and Mr. Purvis at City Hall.

Rev. Dr. W. Robert McFadden, professor of Bible and religion, participated in the Institute on Limited War at the State College of Arkansas, Conway, lecturing on "Ethical Aspects of Limited War," an area related to his doctoral dissertation.

An article by Dr. Emmert F. Bittinger, associate professor of sociology, has been accepted for publication in the Winter 1969 issue of Brethren Life and Thought. It is titled "Can Evolutionary Theory Be Accepted Within the Christian Perspective?"

Two New Courses Offered by College

Two new course offerings will be taught during the second semester for the first time at Bridgewater, both by members of the Foreign Language Department.

The introduction of General Linguistics to the curriculum makes Bridgewater one of the few colleges and universities in Virginia offering the course. It is open to all students, though those in foreign languages, English, and anthropology are expected to be most interested.

Dr. M. Ellsworth Kyger, professor of German, who will teach the course, noted that many language textbooks are now being keyed to linguistics and that it is becoming a part of certification examinations for teachers in a number of states.

Foundations of Education, the second new course, will be taught in alternate spring semesters and will assist B. C. graduates to fill professional education requirements in a number of states. The course will deal with the philosophical, social, and historical foundations of education. Teaching the course will be Dr. Buu Duong, assistant professor of French, who has his doctorate in educational philosophy from Harvard University.

TRUSTEES SEAT NEW MEMBERS, AUTHORIZE PRESIDENT'S SCHOLARS

Three new members were named to the Bridgewater College board of trustees, two filling unexpired terms, while a fourth new trustee will take his seat in 1969.

Charles F. Rinehart, Campobello, S. C., trustee since 1967, was elected to a new five-year term. He is pastor of the Melvin Hill Church of the Brethren, and represents his church district on the board.

Two others named to fill unexpired terms were Dr. R. Lowell Wine, Hollins, Va., professor and chairman of the statistics department at Hollins College, and David L. Bollinger, a school teacher at Sebring, Fla. Dr. Wine '41BA joined the Hollins faculty in 1957, and is the author of a textbook in his field.

Teaching in physics and chemistry at Sebring High School, Mr. Bollinger '63BA has a strong interest in professional teaching associations and has taken additional work at several Florida universities. Both were seated as trustees to represent church districts, Dr. Wine to complete a term expiring in 1970 and Mr. Bollinger to complete a term expiring in 1969.

Elected to a five-year term on the board was Harvey H. Scott, general manager of Valley of Virginia Co-operative Milk Producers Association, Harrisonburg, Va. Mr. Scott '35BA, has been with the firm since 1941. He served on the Harrisonburg School Board for 14 years, and has held many other positions in banking, utility, and professional areas.

In other actions, the board authorized five new $1,000 freshman scholarships, which will be first awarded in the fall of 1970. To be known as the President's Scholars, the recipients will receive a minimum stipend of $1,000 for the four

TRUSTEE EMERITUS J. B. DILLON, DIES

A former trustee and long-time friend of the college, J. B. Dillon, died during the Thanksgiving weekend following a long illness. He was 84 years.

Mr. Dillon, a banker for many years in Bassett, Va., was elected to the college's board of trustees as a member at large in November 1939, and attended his first board meeting the following February. He served with the board for 27 years, being elected trustee emeritus in 1966.

It was the generous devotion to the college of he and his late brother, W. B. Dillon, that led in 1967 to the naming of Dillon Hall dormitory in honor of them and their father, John H. Dillon.

The citation on the Dillons, read at the dedication of Dillon Hall, noted that John Benton Dillon "attended rural schools of his home community and Daleville (Va.) College. After teaching a short time, he accepted a position with the Bank of Bassett in 1911, which later became the First National Bank of Bassett.

"During the 55 years he was associated with this bank, he served as assistant cashier, cashier, executive vice president, vice president, and director. Under his capable leadership this bank underwent considerable growth and development.

ALUMNI REPRESENTATION ASSURED ON TRUSTEE BOARD

Alumni representation will be assured on the board of trustees of Bridgewater College under a recent revision of the board's by-laws.

The trustees have always had the benefit of a large number of alumni on the board. This is, however, the first time that the board will have trustees designated as alumni representatives.

The new by-laws provision provides that the board will have at least five persons who are alumni of the college, two of whom shall have been nominated as trustees-at-large by the Alumni Association membership.

The five-year terms of the two alumni representatives may be overlapping but not concurrent, the modified by-laws stipulate.

The board's Standing Committee to Nominate Trustees has invited the alumni board of directors to have the first alumni representative chosen in advance of the board's annual meeting, April 11-12, 1969.

It is expected that the alumni board will meet in the next couple months to select a minimum of two names to be placed before the total membership of the Association for a vote by mail ballot.

The person receiving the largest number of votes in the mail ballot will be presented to the college's board of trustees as the nominee to be seated by the college board as an alumni representative for a five-year term. The second alumni representative would be chosen by the same procedure after several years.

Concert Choir Releases Record, Video - Tape

A STEREO RECORDING of sacred music, featuring the 35-voice Bridgewater College Concert Choir, has been released for sale. The recording is the fourth made by the college's touring concert group since 1925.

The album is representative of the choir's annual spring program of hymns, anthems, motets and spirituals. The recording of 12 selections opens with the traditional hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee," and includes such numbers as Bach's "Sheep May Safely Graze," the Robert Shaw arrangement of "I Got a Key," and Brahms' "Where Is Such a Nation." The concluding number on the album is the college song, "Bridgewater Fair."

The Concert Choir is one of five vocal groups at B.C. It annually makes a spring tour of churches and high schools and last spring presented a program over a Roanoke television station. Choral numbers are sung in several languages and from memorization. Recent innovations have included the use of jazz, percussion and harpsichord. Much of the program is sung a cappella. Membership in the choir is highly valued, with hundreds of students auditioning each year for the few vacancies produced by graduating seniors.

The cover of the album, entitled, "Bridgewater College Concert Choir in Sacred Concert," features a color photograph of the tower of Memorial Hall at sunset. Memorial Hall houses the offices and practice rooms of the music department.

Concert Choir director is Philip E. Trout, assistant professor of music. Professor Trout became chairman of the music department and director of the choir in 1965, succeeding Prof. Nelson Huffman.

The album sells for $4.25 if picked up at the College Bookstore, Memorial Hall, or for $4.50 by writing to the College Bookstore, Bridgewater College, Bridgewater, Virginia 22812.

A 28-minute color video-tape program of the Concert Choir is available on a free-loan basis to B. C. alumni who may wish to arrange for a showing of the tape over their local television station. Many television stations would welcome this type of program to fill their public service function, if approached by an alumnus or alumni chapter.

The tape includes a portion of the spring 1968 tour program of the Concert Choir and is of exceptional quality in photography and technique. It was produced and filmed in May 1968 at WDBJ-TV Roanoke and has been shown on Richmond and Harrisonburg stations. Requests for scheduling the taped choral program may be sent to the Development Office at Bridgewater College.

Trustee Emeritus Dies

The children of Bassett lovingly call it Mr. Dillon's bank, due to his kindly interest in children and the encouragement he gave them to start savings accounts," the citation said.

Mr. Dillon served ably in church and community activities. He was a deacon, trustee, and secretary of the church school of Pocahontas Baptist Church, Bassett, which he helped charter.

He served for many years on the board of directors of Bassett Furniture Industries and the Blue Ridge Hardware and Supply Co., and was a trustee of the Bassett Public Library.

He is survived by his wife, Betty Davidson Dillon.

COLE PILLARS' USE

The last ALUMNUS asked for suggestions for the use of Cole Hall pillars. Two ideas head the list of suggestions: Make attractive desk pencil holders of the actual wood for alumni and others interested, and use them as free-standing pillars in a court area. The erection of a permanent front on Cole Hall called for their replacement by cast stone columns.

NAMED TO THE DEAN'S LIST for the first semester of the 1968-69 term were 64 B.C. students who achieved a grade point average of 3.2 or above during the second semester of the previous college year.

William E. Barnett, associate professor of sociology, was appointed by the director of Virginia's Department of Welfare to the Advisory Committee for Virginia's project in the "Baccalaureate Manpower Development Program."

1969 Alumnus of the Year

25th Annual Award to a Distinguished B. C. Alumnus

Principles for Selection

1. Vocational achievement. Recognitions recently given within the vocation in terms of advancement, accomplishments, and spirit of service.
2. Loyal devotion to college. Exemplified in activity in behalf of the college through attendance at college functions, continued interest in college, spoken word about college to its patrons and/or prospective students.
3. Approximately equal consideration should be given these preceding principles.
4. Attention should be given to rotation among the vocations.

Send your suggestions to the Alumni Affairs Office.

1. Give name of alumnus.
2. Document with supporting evidence of the alumnus' worthiness under principles as outlined above.
3. All suggestions should be typed and signed.
4. Submit suggestions before February 20, 1969.

Roof of the Continent

of Karsten's ridge which makes up the left side of the cirque. On the following day, Priebe and I began the climb in a light fog, at the lowest part of the ridge. We took off our snowshoes, strapped on climbing irons, and started kicking steps up the 45 degree slope. After 200 feet, we reached a three foot fracture line where a slab avalanche had fallen several days before, and had to use our shovel to continue the route through the fracture line to stable snow. The next 100 feet was easy step-kicking to the base of the final pitch, but here we encountered a crevasse beneath a 60 degree slope. Fortunately, we could cross on a solid snow bridge, and we kicked and chopped steps up the last 100 feet to the ridge crest. We dug a platform on the top of the knife-edge ridge and, after setting up a fixed line, prepared to assist the other rope team, which was coming up behind us with heavy packs.

Forty-five seconds after the fourth man reached the ridge crest, there was a loud "whump," and several feet below us a 100 by 200 foot slab broke off the side of the ridge and avalanched down into the crevasse. The route was gone, but the underlying snow seemed to be solid, so we put the route in again and then started to make our way up the foot-wide ridge.

On the left, the ridge fell away at a 45 degree angle, 4,000 feet down to the Traleika glacier; on the right at a 60 degree angle, some 2,000 feet to the Muldrow. It rapidly became obvious that the snow was extremely unstable, and we finally had to shovel a trench three feet deep down to stable snow, and to continue the trench for three-fourths mile to the base of the steepest part of the ridge, the Coxcomb, where we again found stable conditions. The weather deteriorated during the three days we spent shoveling the ridge, and most of the work was done with visibility limited to a rope-length, or about 150 feet. Camp IV was set up at the base of the Coxcomb at about 12,000 feet.

From here, we made two relays of equipment to the top of the Coxcomb and out onto the Harper glacier, where Camp V was pitched at 15,000 feet, a higher altitude than any mountain in the "lower 48" states. We were now above the fog and clouds, and blessed with sunny, warm, relatively wind-free weather, although the thermometer fell to 14 degrees at night. Three miles up the Harper glacier, on the left, we could see the white dome of Farthing Horn, the shoulder of the south summit, with the brown rock of the Archdeacon's Tower below it. On the right were the ice-covered black cliffs of the north peak.

We left a large cache at Camp V and were able to make one relay with 80-pound packs to the site of Camp VI, at 17,500 feet and two and a half miles further up the glacier. This was the approximate site of the highest camp of the ill-fated Wilcox party, seven of whom had perished in a storm the previous year. We had been asked by the park officials to report any signs of this party, but none were found.

Above the 17,000 foot level, several of us now began to feel the altitude. I had a severe headache and nausea, Foster had a headache, and Switzer was nauseated and dizzy. Only Priebe, who had spent the previous two years above 11,000 feet on the Hawaiian volcano Mauna Kea, was feeling well. After an hour, we stood at Denali pass at the head of the Harper glacier and looked down at the West Buttress and Peters glacier far below. We then turned east and ascended behind the Archdeacon's Tower, climbing steadily and gaining altitude at a rate of 500 feet an hour.

I noticed the need to breathe heavily at a rate of 40-50 breaths per minute, or the thin air would give me a headache within a few seconds; the air contains less than half as much oxygen at this altitude as at sea level. The way became steeper and we started chopping steps in the ice.

Finally, we reached the summit ridge and made our way along it until we reached the highest point.

As we stood among the wands and bamboo poles left by previous expeditions, each of us with his private thoughts, the clouds disappeared and we were treated to one of the most spectacular sights on earth. As far as the eye could see, peak after peak in every direction, most of them unclimbed, many still unnamed. We spent over an hour on the summit taking pictures, and then started back to camp.

The following day we broke camp and started back down the glacier, eager to get off the mountain before our luck and the good weather gave out. The closest call of the expedition came on lower Karsten's ridge, when Priebe, who was roped behind me, tripped and fell off the ridge. He braked his fall by digging his ice ax into the snow while I fell into an instant self-arrest with the pick of my ax in the snow and the front points of my climbing irons digging into each side of the knife-edge ridge.

The rope became taut and stopped him about 40 feet down. Uninjured, he kicked steps back up the slope and we continued our descent. Considerable melting had occurred and many more crevasses were exposed, some of which we had unknowingly crossed on fragile snow-bridges several weeks before.

Stopping only for meals and a few hours sleep, we reached the McKinley River early on July 26. It was much higher and swifter than it had been the month before and took over three hours to ford.

We have now all gone our separate ways, and who knows if we will ever climb together again. Not one of us is the same man who first left Wonder Lake that sunny afternoon many months ago. Each has left part of himself on the wind-blown ridges, and cold, silent valleys of the Great Ice Mountain, but in turn has gained the knowledge that he has been sorely tried and not found inadequate. Someone once said that in mountaineering "there are no victors, only survivors." Lest we be tempted to take too much credit to ourselves, let it be known that our success was only because the mountain let us pass.

ALUMNI PROFILES

Alumnus Is Nationally Cited For Extension Service Work

Mrs. Doris Moyer Whitmore '53BS of Hinton, Va., received national recognition in November at the annual meeting of the National Association of Extension Home Economists for her home economics work.

Home Economics Extension Agent for Rockingham County, Va., Mrs. Whitmore was the recipient of one of the organization's Distinguished Service Awards given at the Phoenix, Ariz., meeting.

Miss Meade Ferguson, women's editor of the Harrisonburg Daily News-Record, interviewed Mrs. Whitmore for the paper. Portions of Miss Ferguson's story follow:

"Almost all our members were in the home" and "very few" extension clubs met at night, said Mrs. Whitmore, thinking back 13 years to her arrival in Rockingham County.

Doris M. Whitmore

Today almost all of the 24 Home Demonstration Clubs in the county meet at night because mothers have found jobs outside the home, she said. Commenting on the shift of the woman's role, Mrs. Whitmore said, "somehow they seem to manage even with large families."

"We're reaching people now that we hadn't reached before," she said. "We're doing more now in special interest activities."

She listed clothing construction, tailoring and money management as special sessions sponsored by the extension service. "Be a Wise Food Shopper" [was] a special interest meeting scheduled for November.

Women continue to sew, knit and crochet because of "the pride that they have" in making the articles, said Mrs. Whitmore. "The price reduction enables them to have more garments," she added.

Commenting on present club membership, the slender brunette said, "In most of our clubs there is a combination of all ages. They just seem to work together real well. I think you need all ages together to have a successful program."

Mrs. Whitmore helped organize the county electromation committee which sponsors kitchen planning workshops for prospective home builders, contractors and electricians. She has served on the recruitment committee, professional improvement committee and as recording secretary of the Virginia Association of Extension Home Economists.

The Hardy County, W. Va., native is president of the Northern Virginia Extension Agents Association. She is married to Walter C. Whitmore, a native of Rockingham County and a salesman for Valley Distributors.

William C. Forrest

Alumnus Assigned To VISTA Project

A January 1969 B.C. graduate, William C. Forrest, has been assigned to a VISTA project with the Arizona State Hospital Youth Program in Phoenix, Ariz.

The Barrington, Ill., man was one of 25 trainees who were graduated recently from a VISTA training program at the University of Oregon training center.

Forrest completed his degree requirements in June and will be graduated in January with a B.A. degree in history. He has attended the University of Miami and the University of Madrid in Spain. While at the college he did volunteer work at the Bridgewater, Va., Home for Aging.

As a Volunteer in Service to America, Forrest, 23, will spend one year at his assignment, which will involve various volunteer activities, including referring families to proper agencies and providing community and learning experience to strengthen abilities of people to act and interact independently, according to VISTA.

Row to Head D. C. Church Office

The Rev. Dr. W. Harold Row '33BA, for 21 years executive secretary of the Brethren Service Commission, has been named head of the Church of the Brethren Washington Office and executive of the denomination's Committee on Interchurch Relations. The office is located in Washington, D. C.

In the first capacity Dr. Row will be liaison between the church and governmental and international leaders primarily in Washington and New York. As executive for interchurch relations, he will direct the denomination's ventures in ecumenical conversations and unity explorations.

On the church's headquarters staff in Elgin, Ill., since 1942, Dr. Row long has been in the forefront of religious and voluntary agency programs centered on relief and reconciliation. He has had wide involvement in the international scene, having engaged in more than 25 administrative visits and major world conferences overseas.

Since 1953 Dr. Row has been chairman of the National Service Board for Religious Objectors, Washington, D. C. For more than a decade, until this past October, he was chairman of the governing board of CROP, the community appeals program of Church World Service. He was a co-founder in 1952 of International Voluntary Services, a prototype of the Peace Corps in sending young agricultural and educational specialists abroad.

This fall in Paris he carried a pivotal role in the central committee of the Christian Peace Conference, a movement begun largely by church leaders from behind the Iron Curtain. In 1963 and 1967 he was instrumental in carrying out a four-part exchange between the Russian Orthodox Church and the Church of the Brethren, an exchange which is to be followed the next two summers by peace seminars in Switzerland and the Soviet Union jointly sponsored by the two bodies.

Through the years Dr. Row has been a member of various program boards of the National Council of Churches. He has given major attention to the program and activities of Church World Service for two decades.

A native of Junior, W. Va., Dr. Row also holds degrees from Crozer Theological Seminary, Philadelphia, the University of Pennsylvania, and Bethany Theological Seminary, Oak Brook, Ill.

His wife, the former Leona Zigler '34BA, has been a teacher and administrator in the Elgin Public Schools since 1954. She currently is the principal of Garfield Elementary School.

The Rows have a son, Harry, on the faculty of Wisconsin State University, and a daughter, Bette Jo, in graduate work at the University of Chicago.

The Rows plan to move to the Washington, D. C. area in the summer of 1969. In the meantime Dr. Row will continue to serve in the Elgin headquarters of the Church of the Brethren as its director of international services while assuming the interchurch relations portfolio early next year.

years of college, at the rate of $250 per year. Demonstrated financial need could result in a higher stipend above the minimum amount.

Two of the scholarships will be awarded the two highest ranking entering women, and two will be awarded the two highest ranking incoming men. To be considered, the applicants must rank in the top 10 per cent of their secondary school class. A fifth scholarship is to be granted to the highest ranking student applying from among winners and runners-up in the Science Talent Search conducted by the Junior Academy of Science of the Virginia Academy of Science. A President's Scholar will be required to maintain a 3.2 cumulative quality point average.

The board also confirmed the name of Moomaw Hall for the new home economics facility; authorized the appointment of a committee to suggest an appropriate name for the campus center; approved an investigation of the possibility of moving Flory House and the home management house; approved an investigation into razing East Hall and the old apartment house on College Street; authorized planning committee study of a new dormitory project, and encouraged the classroom administration building planning committee to proceed with its work and as an adjunct to study the eventual use of the old residence halls as educational and office buildings.

Alumni Director Being Sought

Every effort is being made to secure an additional staff member to fill the vacancy created in the Alumni Affairs Office by Jacob Replogle's resignation. Mr. Replogle assumed the pastorate of the Florin Church of the Brethren, Mt. Joy, Pa., on November 15, after 12 years with the college.

In the meantime, David L. Holl, in addition to his regular duties as director of development, will give attention to this general area until a director of alumni affairs is secured.

EAGLE SPORTS PARADE

EAGLES RECORD FIRST WINNING SEASON

The 1968 Eagle football team will go down in Bridgewater history as the first team to ever have a winning season. In the win-lose record, the Eagles were three and one in the Mason-Dixon Conference and five and three overall.

In achieving this record B.C. defeated Gallaudet, Hampden-Sydney, Frostburg, Shepherd and Towson State. Their three losses were to West Virginia Tech, Randolph-Macon, and Washington and Lee University.

The most impressive Eagle victory of the season was against Hampden-Sydney. The Crimson and Gold defeated the Tigers in the last 34 seconds, 7-3, for the first victory in the Eagles history over Hampden-Sydney.

The Bridgewater defense was one of the best in the state this year. They held their opponents to an average of 67 yards per game, rushing, and 131 yards per game, passing. The B.C. offense did its share by putting a total of 161 points on the scoreboard and accumulating

1,470 yards rushing and 427 yards passing.

Perhaps this is just a beginning of a winning football tradition at Bridgewater. Eleven men who hope that a new tradition has been started are the seniors on this year's squad. They are John Loving, Terry Westhafer, Joe Dudash, Mike McDonald, Eric Rice, Joe Powell, Bruce Hart, Paul Tobler, Todd Mooney, and co-captains Barry Myers and Charlie Mason.

There is a twelfth man also. He is Coach John Spencer who hopes to continue with a winning team—his motto being, "A moral victory can never take the place of a real victory."—CHARLIE MASON

GRADUATION COSTLY TO B. C. CAGERS

Graduation proved costly to the B.C. cagers, with no experienced seniors on the varsity team this season. The positions of Jim Upperman, Ed Cook, and Rick Lockhart will be hard to fill. However, six returning lettermen enhance the prospects of the season, now underway.

The Crimson and Gold team lost their opening game to Washington and Lee, 94-63, but went on to win their first home game against Gallaudet College, 68-50.

The Eagles and Coach Melvin "Shifty" Myers have 23 games scheduled, 15 of them being Mason-Dixon conference games.

The two starters returning from last year's team are juniors Rick Wampler, 6'1" forward, and Dennis Woolfrey, 5'9" guard, team co-captains. Woolfrey, although short, is very quick and should be the team playmaker. Wampler should provide a steady scoring touch from his position at forward. Coach Myers is also counting on him to rebound and play a tough defense.

Other lettermen returning are forwards Jim Wampler, 6'3", Tom Murray, 6'3", and Ron Cook, 6'2". The only back court letterman returning is Jim Hall, 6' guard. All are sophomores.

Jim Wampler, a strong man under the boards, and Murray, a good shooter, should make the front court well balanced. Cook handles the ball well, has good moves, and shoots well, while Hall is a good defensive player and able playmaker.

Non-letter winners returning are guards Larry Glick, 5'11", Ken Richards, 6'2", and forward Tim Cassady, 6'. Also returning after sitting out a year is center Bob Boyle, 6'6".

Lack of experience seems to be the Eagles' biggest problem for the current season. It may be hard for the Eagles to improve on their 14-11 record of last year, but with a little luck the B.C. cagers could have a comparable season.

CROSS COUNTRY MEN 4-1 IN DUAL MEETS

Cross-country in 1968 for B.C. produced much the same kind of season as did the previous year. The team went 4-1 in dual meets, again ran third in the Mason-Dixon Conference, but surrendered the Little 8 title, won the season before.

First race was with emergent Eastern Mennonite College, headed by Elton Horst, and the Courtiers avenged old scores by beating the Eagles 25-31. From then on, Bridgewater cleaned the dual competition. Successive wins were scored over Lynchburg, 18-39; Gallaudet, 19-42; Washington and Lee, 19-49, and Roanoke, 22-37.

Eastern Mennonite returned to Riverside Field to win the Virginia Little Eight championship with a low total of 31, followed by Bridgewater, 50; Roanoke, 63; Randolph-Macon, 101; Lynchburg, 103.

At Charlottesville, Bridgewater ran seventh in the State Intercollegiate Championships, behind winning William and Mary, and also Virginia Polytechnic, University of Virginia, EMC, Richmond, and Virginia Military Institute, but ahead of Roanoke, Virginia Union, and Christopher Newport.

A fine field was on hand Nov. 23 for the Mason-Dixon Conference Championships held at Bridgewater. Catholic University repeated as team titlist, Mt. St. Mary's was again runner-up, and Bridgewater third. This is the same order of finish as last year in both cross-country and track. Following the Eagles came Gallaudet, Johns Hopkins, Towson, Roanoke, Loyola, Lynchburg, Old Dominion and Western Maryland.

Outstanding individual runner for the Eagles all fall was junior Charlie Fairchilds, Richmond, Va., who took over as number one when Lancaster missed the Lynchburg dual. Brian Kennedy, Alexandria, Va., junior, was preoccupied with his premed labs, but ran against Roanoke and in the Conference to strengthen the team measurably.

Bill Pamplin, Crofton, Md., was the leading sophomore, running number three or four. Larry Carpenter, Dayton, Va., and Ray Ritchie, Harrisonburg, Va., sophomore middle distance men, met with varying success at the longer distance.

The freshman contingent was noteworthy. Jim Clark, Alexandria, Va.; Ernie Neff, Dayton, Va., and

DR. JOPSON times Ken Lancaster at 19-11-5 as he takes first place in the Roanoke cross-country meet.

John Davis, Dickerson, Md., all lettered, and Art Richmond, Arlington, Va., earned numerals. All have much promise of future development, as do the sophomores John Price, Arlington, Va., and John Pritchard, Falls Church, Va., who ran with little previous experience.

The only senior lost through graduation this year will be Ron Shear, Blacksburg, Va. Ron was in the scoring group at season's start but was forced out later by illness.

Measuring this team by times run, it was one of the best to represent Bridgewater. Kenny Lancaster ran the varsity course of 3¾ miles in 19 minutes, 11 seconds. This is 12 seconds under the best previous Bridgewater time, run by Merle Crouse in 1949.

Most noteworthy feature of Mason-Dixon Conference cross-country is the overall improvement. The average time for the course run at Bridgewater has been cut about a minute since the great early days of the sport here, fondly known, at least to Coach "Doc" Jopson, as the Crouse-Kline era.

EAGLETTES POST GOOD FIELD HOCKEY SEASON

B. C.'s Eaglettes completed another successful field hockey season under the coaching of Miss Laura S. Mapp, assistant professor of physical education. The varsity squad compiled a 6-3-2 win-lose-tie record, while the junior varsity completed their schedule with a 4-2-3 showing.

The varsity defeated Lynchburg (4-0), Roanoke (3-2), William and Mary (7-3), and Mary Washington (3-1) colleges, and Virginia Commonwealth University (3-2), while losing twice to Madison College (1-3, 0-3) and once to Roanoke College (2-3). One game with Lynchburg was tied, 2-2. Ginny Snuggs, a Baltimore, Md., freshman center forward, was high scorer for the year with 14 goals to her credit.

The year was highlighted when the varsity team traveled to Lynchburg, Va., for the Blue Ridge

Religion Institute to Explore 'Future Shape of the Church'

Three guest leaders and the college religion and philosophy faculty will explore "The Future Shape of the Church" in the 74th annual Spiritual Life Institute, February 4-6, on the B. C. campus.

Participating will be Dr. Robert A. Blees, director of the Pastoral Counseling Center, First Community Church, Columbus, Ohio; Dr. C. C. Goen, professor of church history, Wesley Theological Seminary, Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Rosa Page Welch, a church and youth leader with the Disciples of Christ.

Dr. Blees will address the Institute on the role of the pastor in today's church, while Dr. Goen will discuss cultural influences on the American church. Mrs. Welch will be worship leader and will lift up her concerns about the church and minorities in the closing session.

Major addresses will be given also by Bridgewater College faculty members: Dr. William G. Willoughby, professor of philosophy and religion; Rev. Dr. W. Robert McFadden, professor of Bible and religion, David G. Metzler, assistant professor of philosophy and religion, and Dr. Martha B. Thornton, assistant professor of religion.

The Institute will center on such concerns as church renewal, Christian education and motivation, the church's mission, liturgy, ministering to minorities, and pastoral care. The Rev. Samuel A. Harley, director of church relations, will direct the sessions which are designed for inspiration and spiritual enrichment of ministers and laymen.

Dr. Goen has been at Wesley Theological Seminary since 1960, and has held pastorates in Texas and Oklahoma. He has written a book on New England revivalism and separatism, and has contributed many articles and book reviews for publication.

With a background in psychology, Dr. Blees has been minister of counseling at First Community Church since 1957, and became director of the counseling center when it was established as a separate department of the church's program in 1957. He has used role playing as an educational and therapeutic technique since 1951 in his work.

Mrs. Welch has gained note for her own ministry as a singer and layman in church work. In 1952-53 she spent 7½ months on an ecumenical Mission of Goodwill tour sponsored by several denominations and groups. She has worked with Church World Service and spent two years in missionary service in Northern Nigeria for the Church of the Brethren. Eureka College in Illinois conferred the Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree on her in 1953.

'Projection' Program in Second Year

A program is underway by which to invite and encourage those who have not yet participated in the 90th Anniversary Fund to do so.

Area committees are assisting in making personal and phone contact in this second year of the 90th Anniversary Fund program. Alumni who served as area chairmen last year have been asked to continue to give leadership.

To date, the following Virginia and Maryland areas have programs underway: Baltimore, Washington, Hockey Tournament. While there, they tied a strong Hollins team (1-1) and soundly defeated Randolph-Macon Women's College by a score of 4-0.

In recognition of these efforts, five Bridgewater women were selected to play for the Blue Ridge Association at the Southeast Hockey Tournament. Carol Bucher, Manheim, Pa., senior, left fullback, was chosen to play on Blue Ridge College I, while Nancy Boller, Graceham, Md., junior, center halfback; Becka Monk, Springfield, Va., junior, right inner; Mary Anna Sanders, Warsaw, Va., junior, goalie, and Ginny Snuggs were placed on Blue Ridge College II.

Although these girls were chosen for this special recognition, the year was marked by an exceptional team effort on the part of the players as team unity and a spirit of cooperation prevailed throughout the season.

Seven seniors played their last year: Judi Ballard, Easton, Md.; Carol Bucher; Sue Cope, Parsippany, N. J.; Anna Mae Donley, Myerstown, Pa.; Karen Muntain, Baltimore, Md.; Gwen Powell, Bethesda, Md.; and Janet Simpson, Westminster, Md. Miss Mapp's ability to promote a high level of sportsmanship and pride in team participation is credited for the quality of play and team spirit which has become an integral part of the women's athletic program at Bridgewater.

Virginia, Westminster, Richmond, Roanoke, and Bridgewater-Dayton. Over $560,000 has been subscribed toward the $1,250,000 goal since the program was launched in September 1967.

The reaching of this goal is essential if the classroom-administration building is to be under construction or completed by the time of the 90th anniversary of the college in 1970. The campus center and home economics facilities are under construction and promised for the opening of the 1969 school year.
